Capture of Italian Libyan Base Completed by British

CONTROL 80 MILES OF COAST

More Than 14,000 Prisoners, Including Generals, Reported Taken as Tobruk Falls; Continued Pressure Exerted East of Metemma, on Ethiopian Front, and in Kenya Colony

SEEK TO OPEN SHORT CUT TO COAST TOWNS

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 23—(AP)—British headquarters announced today that the capture of Tobruk, Italian Libyan base, was completed last night and that more than 14,000 prisoners were taken.

A communique said the prisoners included four generals, one a corps commander and another a divisional commander, and an admiral.

British casualties were said to be less than 500.

"Enemy casualties are not yet fully ascertained," said the British command's communique, "but 2,000 wounded already are being evacuated.

"A number of senior army and naval staff officers" were listed among the prisoners.

The communique made succint references to offensive actions against Italian East Africa, hundreds of miles from the north African, or Libyan, battle line.

It told of continued pressure east of Metemma, on the Ethiopian front, and in Kenya colony, facing both Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

British troops which pursued the Italians from Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan near the border of Italian Eritrea, were said to have established contact within Eritrea, where the Fascists had taken up defensive positions dominating Viscia and Varentu.

The capture of Tobruk with a 36-hour land, air and sea assault culminated a siege that gave the British undisputed control of 80 miles of the Libyan coastline and an ideal base from which to continue their westward drive.

Royal Air Force headquarters reported heavy raids Monday night on Derna, 9 miles west of Tobruk. The bombs started fires which the RAF said could be seen 80 miles away. Derna would be the im-

UNABLE TO FIND DONOVANPAPERS

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 23.—(AP)—Colonel William J. Donovan, unofficial American observer on a secret mission, today talked to Premier Dragisha Cvetkovic in starting a round of conferences with Yugoslav government leaders. He came here after similar talks in Sofia, Bulgaria.

In Sofia, King Boris of Bulgaria, ordered an intensive search for a missing wallet belonging to Colonel Donovan, containing a diplomatic passport, two letters of introduction signed by Secretary of State Hull and Navy Secretary Knox, letters of credit and an undisclosed amount of money.

The colonel discovered his loss yesterday. It was first assumed the wallet might have been mislaid, but today's continuing search led increasingly to the conclusion that it had been stolen.

PENNSYLVANIA PAROLE SYSTEM SURVEY SOUGHT

Lieutenant Governor Samuel S. Lewis Preparing Bill for Legislative Appointment of Commission to Investigate

NOT NEW SUGGESTION

Harrisburg, Jan. 23—(AP)—Lieutenant Governor Samuel S. Lewis said today he will ask the legislature to survey Pennsylvania's parole system with the idea of suggesting improvements and relieving cabinet officers of their present pardon board duties.

"I am preparing a bill myself for introduction in the legislature," the lieutenant governor declared. "It will simply be to appoint a commission to serve without salary and investigate the whole situation. The committee would be instructed to report back to the next legislature."

At present the pardon board is composed of Lewis as chairman; Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, secretary of the commonwealth; William S. Livengood, secretary of internal affairs; and Claude T. Reno, attorney general. It has jurisdiction over prisoners in state penal institutions. County courts decide upon parole in jail prisoners.

Lewis expressed the opinion that the cabinet officers did not have sufficient time to look personally into each of the many cases com-

BILLION MARK NEAR IN STATE DEFENSE WORKS

Washington, Jan. 23—(AP)—Contracts and expenditures in Pennsylvania under the national defense program are approaching the billion dollar mark, Senator James J. Davis informed the senate today.

"Our great state is now rapidly being geared into full production," he said in introducing a review of state defense activities prepared at his rquest by the division of state and local cooperation, National Defense Advisory Commission. He asked that the review be printed as a public document to "show what cooperation is possible between a state and the federal government in defense activities."

The document showed contracts and expenditures aggregating $936,519,232 in Pennsylvania between July 1 and last December 31.

A labor department estimate in the report showed a rise of 174,000 in the number of employes in the first ten months of the year. The preliminary estimate as of November 15 was 2,758,000 employes in the state.

The largest volume of defense contracts was awarded in the Philadelphia district. If Camden, N. J., and its big shipbuilding industry is included, the figure for that area alone exceeds a billion dollars.

The $936,519,232 aggregate for the state was divided into $267,287, 950 in army contracts, $664,862,424 in navy contracts, $3,649,047 in WPA defense projects, and $719,711 for defense training. The total omits a few items for which no exact estimate by states was possible. It does not include commitments made in the current month.

The review included an analysis showing the distribution of major defense contracts by geographical regions and selected industrial areas in the state. These included: Erie-Irvine-Titusville. $11,632,000 ordnance and ammunition.

RUMANIA UPRISING QUELLED

Government Reports Through Budapest Legation That Rebellion By Communists and Young Iron Guard Extremists Is Put Down After "Many" Are Killed Throughout Country

OFFICE OF PREMIER IS MACHINE-GUNNED

By The Associated Press

Budapest, Hungary, Jan. 23—(AP)—The Rumanian government announced today through its Budapest legation that it had quelled a "rebellion" by "notorious Communists" and young Iron Guard extremists after "many" had been killed throughout the country.

Public buildings in various parts of Rumania were reported cleared of the "rebels" under orders from Premier General Ian Antonescu after his tolerance was taxed by a machine-gun attack yesterday on the Bucharest building housing his office.

It was then, according to a statement issued through the Budapest legation that Antonescu "instructed the army and police to re-establish order."

The machine-gun attack on the premier's office was said in the official statement to have been organized with 600 Iron Guard Legionnaires by General George Petrovicescu, who is reported to have been ousted Tuesday as interior minister.

The statement did not disclose what had become of General Petrovicescu, but those under his alleged leadership were said to have "surrendered in a body, weeping and openly expressing disgust with themselves."

The legation statement said Antonescu had become "complete master" of the situation.

The German military is taking no hand whatever in the Rumanian strife, authorized sources asserted in Berlin today.

When asked whether the situation might become such that German intervention might be necessary they declined to comment, stating the question was hypothetical and referred to a situation which had not developed.

They said the Rumanian vice premier, Horia Sima, who also is the leader of the pro-Fascist Iron Guard, was not enroute to Berlin.

PARDON BOARD HEARS APPEALS

Harrisburg, Jan. 23—(AP)—Eight persons convicted of first degree murder brought pleas for commutation of sentence before the state pardon board today.

Another, Paul Petrillo, 45-year-old south Philadelphia tailor, was granted a month's postponement of his hearing because of the illness of his attorney.

Petrillo was sentenced to death for his part in the Philadelphia murder-for-insurance ring in which two women and Paul's nephew, Herman Petrillo, have been sentenced to die. Herman Petrillo has asked for a new trial.

Those whose pleas came up today included Francesco Cileone and Walter Maloney, Philadelphia;

TWO ARE ENTOMBED IN HAZLETON MINE

Hazleton, Pa., Jan. 23.—(AP)—Rescue workers dug their way slowly today through 100 feet of debris toward two men trapped far below the surface in a mine of the Glen Alden Coal Company at Treskow. There was no indication that the men still lived.

They were entombed yesterday when a pillar gave way and the roof fell. The victims are Henry Sussick, 40, married and father of three; and Michael Barkocy, 41, father of seven.

The African campaign: British capture four Italian generals and an admiral among 14,000 prisoners thus far counted in the fall of Tobruk, Italian seaport in Libya; 200 guns and vast quantities of war materials confiscated; Italian high command admits fall of city which they say was captured by "vastly superior forces."

In Rumania: Rumanian government says Dictator Premier Antonescu "complete master" of the situation in Bucharest where bloody civil war has resulted in "many deaths."

The air war: Lone German raider attacks two towns in East Anglia today after R. A. F. pounded the Dusseldorf area in the Ruhr valley during the night.

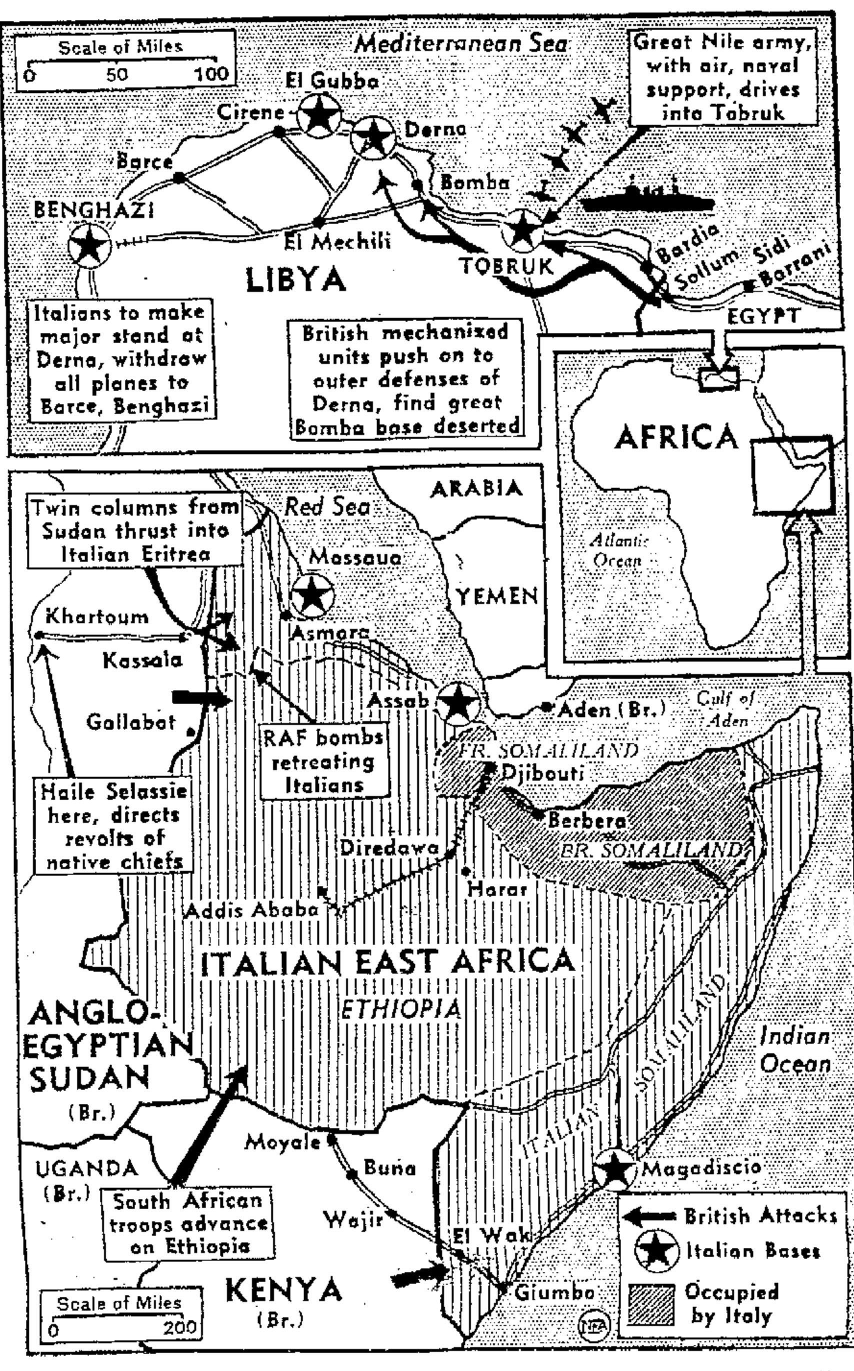
Double Trouble in Dark Continent



Reported fall of Tobruk makes the dark continent seem all the darker for Mussolini, who is getting double trouble from British attacks in Libya and Italian East Africa. Second Contingent of Selective Service Trainees from County Is Honored at Dinner by Committee

Warren county's second contingent of Selective Service trainees, who will leave tomorrow morning to enter the United States armed forces, and one officer of Company I, 112th Infantry, Pennsylvania National Guard, who has left for a month's training at Valley Forge Military Academy, were honored at a dinner and program last night at the American Legion Home.

Sponsored by the Warren Citizens Committee, the affair was the first of several such entertainments to be provided by the group for those who will enter military service during the coming year.

Last night's dinner and entertainment was attended by about 35 men, including ten of the 13 Selective Service men, who leave tomorrow for Pittsburgh, where they will be inducted into service.

Also honored was Austin L. Swanson, first lieutenant of Company I, who left last night to start a month's training prior to the mobilization of the National Guard unit in February.

NAZI PRISONERS LAND IN CANADA FOR INTERNMENT

An East Canadian Port, Jan. 23—(AP)—A top-rank German air ace and hundreds of other war prisoners rolled westward toward Canadian internment camps today following the recapture of one of a pair who broke away after their prison ship docked.

The escape of two prisoners was disclosed shortly after the captive fliers and seamen had debarked to waiting special trains last night. One was recaptured early today and patrols searched the dock area for the other.

Police announced the presence among the prisoners of a noted 25-year-old Nazi fighter pilot credited with downing 56 planes, beginning with the Spanish civil war.

SETTLEMENT OF DEFENSE STRIKE IS NEGOTIATED

By The Associated Press

State and federal governments, with a churchman recruited to help, worked against time today to settle a defense industry strike in Wisconsin, while from elsewhere there came news of a work-curtailing shipyard dispute, and peaceful agreement in two aircraft plants.

The Wisconsin strike, affecting $26,000,000 of defense orders, largely naval equipment, was at the Allis-Chalmers Company. Governor Julius P. Heil, who helped settle a strike there in 1939, took

BIG TWA AIRLINER CRASHES

Two Are Killed and Twelve Injured When Transcontinental Plane Smashes to Ground Within Mile of St. Louis-Lambert Municipal Airport; Lands in Yard of Farmhouse

LINE'S FIRST CRASH SINCE MARCH, 1938

St. Louis, Jan. 23—(AP)—A mile from safety, a big Transcontinental and Western airliner crashed before dawn today approaching Lambert-St. Louis municipal airport, killing the chief pilot and a passenger and injuring 12 other persons.

Flying on instruments, Captain P. T. W. Scott passed over the field at 4:13 a. m. CST, and three minutes later he was dead in the wreckage of the ship, "The Sky-Sleeper."

J. F. Mott, a TWA employe who boarded the plane as a passenger at Kansas City, also was killed.

Far behind schedule, the airliner, enroute from Los Angeles to New York, flew low across the field and then banked to the left in making a swing for a landing from the southwest.

Residents of the neighborhood heard an angry roar of the twin motors, apparently when the pilot "gunned" his engines in an effort to climb. A "big flash" followed.

The giant plane clipped a maple tree, 40 feet high, ripped a wing across the top of a row of trees and a telephone pole and smashed to the ground in the back yard of a farm house. It did not burn.

One motor was torn from the plane while it still was in the air and the other broke off at the impact with the ground.

One side of the ship was sheared away and the first persons to reach the scene said some of the passengers were able to get out by themselves. The others were helped out.

TWA reported the crash was its first in 614,269,533 passenger miles. Its last previous crash, near Fresno, Calif., March 1, 1938, killed six passengers and three crew members.

Capt. Scott, who was 36 and a resident of New York City, had been with the company since Sept. 16, 1933. He had flown 1,500,000 miles and had 10,000 hours in the air without an accident. He was a graduate of the naval air school.

WILLKIE FLIGHT HAS DAY'S DELAY

Aboard the Yankee Clipper at Horta, the Azores, Jan. 23.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, riding a Pan-American Clipper to Horta through a gale described by the plane's captain as the worst seen here in two years, faced a day's delay before continuing his trip to England.

Swells off Horta and stormy weather on the route to Lisbon caused Pan-American Airways officials to defer the Clipper's takeoff until daybreak tomorrow. The plane arrived here at 7:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m. EST) today.

En route to study war conditions in Britain, Willkie already had seen evidence of United States aid to the British.

At Darnell Island, off Hamilton, Bermuda, his eyes widened yesterday when he saw two 13-ton flying boats—bombers to be flown to Britain. Beside them he saw three famous veteran fliers Bernt Balchen, Clyde Pangborn and Homer Berry—lazily tossing pennies.

"Ferrying bombers is getting dull," Berry, who fought with Canada in the World War and wore again a Canadian uniform, told Willkie. "I am joining a fighting unit soon."

The American-made bombers will be flown to England from Bermuda instead of Newfoundland, the pilots explained, because of weather difficulties encountered over the north Atlantic.

JACKSON MOST MENTIONED FOR SUPREME COURT

Senator Byrnes Favored by Southern Group Although Attorney General Is Given Edge As McReynolds Successor

WHITE HOUSE SILENT

Washington, Jan. 23—(AP)—The name of Attorney General Robert H. Jackson was most frequently heard in capital circles today as a possible successor to Associate Justice James Clark McReynolds of the Supreme Court, who has notified President Roosevelt he will retire February 1.

President Roosevelt, however, kept his own counsel and the White House was barren of hints as to who would receive the sixth Supreme Court appointment Mr. Roosevelt has had since taking office.

As far as conjecture went, the field was wide open.

Even those with other ideas conceded, for the moment, that Jackson had the edge. Some, however, thought the coveted post might go to Senator Byrnes (D-SC), whose nomination would satisfy those who believe a southerner should be picked. It was reported that three Democratic colleagues of great influence—Senate Majority Leader Barkley (Ky), and Senators Harrison (Miss) and Glass (Va)—urged Byrnes' cause

THREE DEAD IN NEWKENSINGTON CROSSING CRASH

New Kensington, Jan. 23—(AP)—The Pennsylvania railroad's Buffalo Express, speeding along through a light fog and rain, crashed into an automobile at the Fourth street crossing here late last night, killing three persons and injuring a fourth.

The dead were identified as Judith Planovzky, 19, her sister, Ann, 18, both of Ford City, and Fred Como, 23, of Arnold, who had been keeping company with Ann Planovzky. The sisters, friends reported, only yesterday quit as waitresses in a New Kensington restaurant where they were employed under the name of Martin.

Louis Isaac, 20, of New Kensington, fourth occupant of the automobile, was reported in a critical condition at a New Kensington hospital.

The train, heading north from Pittsburgh, struck the front of the automobile, crashing and hurling it almost 100 feet from the tracks. The roar of the crash aroused a score or more of residents in the neighborhood, who rushed to the scene. The train, in charge of Engineer J. T. Swindell, of Franklin, sped on for four blocks before it could be halted.

Police expressed the belief the driver of the automobile, which was bound to Ford City, apparently sighted the train bearing down through the mist and stopped the machine too close to the tracks.

SAYS NO VICTORY POSSIBLE

Tells House Committee United States and Great Britain Could Not Win European War on Present Basis; Declares Stand of American People for British Aid Is Mistake

LEASE-LEND MEASURE BRANDED STEP TO WAR

Washington, Jan. 23—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh flatly asserted today that even a combination of the United States and Great Britain could not win the European war "on the present basis" and he urged a "negotiated peace."

The famous flier told the house foreign affairs committee that he did not believe that "anything short of war or beyond war" would win the struggle unless there was a collapse behind the lines of one side or the other.

He said he believed the stand of "the American people" in favor of aiding the British "was a mistake." And he declared he was opposed to the lease-lend bill for British aid because it was "a step away from democracy" and "one more step closer to war."

Entrance into any foreign war, Lindbergh said, should be avoided, for, regardless of what happened abroad, this country and this hemisphere are "strong enough" to protect themselves. He advocated establishment of a string of air bases by this country and the creation of an air force of about 10,000 first line planes and an equal number of reserves, exclusive of trainers. Such a force, he said, would "insure American security."

While the hearing went forward, Senator Taft (R-Ohio), at the other side of the capitol, proposed sub-

SEEK SOLUTION TO PRODUCTION

Philadelphia, Jan. 23.—(AP)—A majority of the anthracite operators called on the rest of the industry today for quick approval of proposal which many said might solve the troublesome "bootleg" production problem.

Already endorsed in principle by 90 percent of the producers, the recommendations would amend the anthracite emergency program agreement, but must be accepted by all the operators before becoming operative.

In essence, the new plan would permit any cooperating producer to purchase the output of "bootleg" mines which are operated with the consent of the landowner; provide a weekly supplemental allocation for operators hiring miners now engaged in unauthorized production; and seek the opening of new mines to provide employment of "bootleggers."

4-H Club Members Seek Honors at Pennsylvania's Annual Farm Show

Harrisburg, Jan. 23—(AP)—The livestock groomed and fed by Pennsylvania's farm boys and girls during the past year was led before judges at the State Farm Show today for 4-H Club honors, with sales scheduled for the best.

Baby beef cattle and lambs purchased by county 4-H groups and handled through the year by the rural young folk were paraded before the experts in the arena, where their elders had competed for three preceding days.

The show's champion cattle, aside from the 4-H Club animals, already have been crowned, and before tomorrow night, when the 25th anniversary exhibit ends, they'll all be on their way home.

For some animals, especially in the swine divisions, the ribbon winners will be heading for new stalls, after sales which took up most of yesterday, and continued today.

The baby beef likewise will be sold tomorrow afternoon, the prices to be paid in relation to their showing. Unlike the main cattle events, which recognize only champions by breeds, a grand champion and reserve grand champion among the 4-H Club cattle and lamb was to be chosen.

Cattle experts picked the calves for the 4-H clubbers, and then the boys and girls drew lots for them, and nursed them along with today's showing as the climax. The cattle were classed according to weights, which average between 1,050 and 1,150 pounds.

Every animal is insured by the county clubs, and special insurance is taken out by the groups to cover champion and reserve champion steers from the time of their selection until delivery to the purchaser.

More Than Million Idle Acres Reforested In National Areas

More than a million idle acres have been put to work producing timber and other forest crops, according to the year-end summary of the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, giving the results of tree planting on National Forests in thirty States.

With 902,040 acres of existing plantations reported from previous years, the preliminary summary of 1940 planting of 146,942 acres brings the total area of National Forest land reforested or afforested to 1,048,982 acres. The bulk of the work in recent years has been accomplished by Civilian Conservation Corps camps under Forest Service supervision.

The five-year average costs on the National Forests, which include charges for labor as well as materials used in growing the trees in nurseries, ground preparation where necessary, and actual planting of an average of 955 trees per acre, amounts to eleven dollars and fifty cents per acre. With fire protection costs of a few cents per acre a year added, the government stands to obtain a good net return from planting at the end of a fifty or sixty year period on areas where commercial timber is being grown.

Forest Service officials estimate that about three million acres of National Forest lands still need replanting in order to repair damage from fires or neglect of the lands previous to their acquisition by the Federal Government for National Forest purposes. The planting job on privately owned forest lands is much larger—approximately 74 million acres, or an area as large as Italy, being in need of reforestation.

On Allegheny National Forest there are nearly 30,000 acres so severely burned in years gone by that planting is required to make them productive. This forest has already planted more than 10,000 acres to date, largely by the CCC camps. The magnitude of the job done by the boys in these camps is better appreciated, perhaps, if the number of trees is given. At the average of 955 trees per acre, it took 9,550,000 seedlings for this forest alone.

The forest service maintains a large nursery at Parsons, W. Va., to supply the National Forests in this region. They supply mostly two and three year old seedlings of red pine, Norway spruce, and various hardwood species. Plans are going forward to plant approximately 840 acres additional during April and May of this year.

According to Forest Supervisor R. F. Hemingway, this will require approximately 800,000 trees, which is slightly less than were planted last spring, when 921 acres were reforested.

The 1940 acreage includes the 103 acre "Penny Pines" project of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who's interest and contributions have aided tree planting in nearly all of our states.

The general public can aid materially in protecting this planting investment from fire. A more fire-conscious public is also needed if devastating fires, which make tree plantings necessary, are to be prevented.

"MELODY RANCH" AT LIBRARY THEATRE FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Various considerations are involved in determining the popularity of a picture star. Gene Autry has not won the coveted distinction of being "Public Cowboy Number One" merely because he received more fan mail than any other actor. The Republic star was selected as the outstanding western personality three years in a row by an impartial committee of motion picture trade paper judges. His pictures have played in more theatres in the United States than any other star's. His phonograph records outsell those of any other singer, male or female, and his radio program is among the highest in the Crosley ratings.

"Melody Ranch," his super-budgeted picture which opens tomorrow at the Library Theatre, presents a large and impressive case of supporting players, including Jimmy Durante, Ann Miller, George "Gabby" Hayes, Mary Lee, Billy Benedict and Jerome Cowan. It was directed by Joseph Santley under Associate Producer Sol C. Siegel.

They all do, including the audience, when Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland and other talented juveniles, many of whom appeared in "Babes in Arms," flash on the screen in "Strike Up the Band," today and Friday at the Columbia Theatre. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has provided the hilarious musical of youngsters, who organize a high school band and win a radio broadcast contest, with lavish comedy adjuncts which run moments of sincere heart interest.

oners is forbidden under war regulations, but the description, together with the captive's possession of the iron cross with oak leaves—highest Nazi military award of its kind—coincided with that of Major Helmuth Wick, commander of the famous Richtofen squadron.

(Wick was shot down by a British fighter over the English channel. A German communique Dec. 4, reporting his failure to return, said the Nazi air force bad lost "one of its most audacious and successful pursuit pilots." Fellow pilots reported he descended by parachute to the sea off the Isle of Wight just after bagging his 56th plane.) Internment officers said the shipment of prisoners included a majority of the Nazi fliers shot down and captured in Britain up to the time the ship sailed, as well as sailors taken from German submarines.

[illegible]ared ten more agriculturists to be "Master Farmers" last night at the annual get together of persons who have been selected for the honor, 173 since 1927.

Pre-show estimates of a half-million attendance for the five-day exposition, which officials say is the biggest of its kind in the nation, appeared today to be too low.

State police said 125,000 persons visited the 14-acre attraction on both Tuesday and Wednesday, and 85,000 on the opening day, leaving only 165,000 to be made up today, which in past years has been the peak attendance day, and Friday.'

"We offered to confer on every point except the closed shop," said Max Babb, company president. The CIO's representative said the next move was "entirely" up to Allis-Chalmers.

Employes at the Alabama Drydock and Shipbuilding Company of Mobile, a navy destroyer repair base, stopped work without striking after conferences failed to negotiate agreement on pay increases. Also, labor spokesmen said 77 men quit work at the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation yard in Pascagoula, Miss., in a similar situation.

All was peace and harmony in the Vultee Aircraft plant at Nashville, Tenn., where representatives of labor and management announced signing of a contract barring strikes and lockouts, providing pay raises and vacations with pay. The contract took form in a month of amiable discussion.

The CIO union at San Diego ratified unanimously a contract with the Ryan Aeronautical Company carrying wage boosts for every man in the plant. A strike had been threatened.

This accomplished, CIO leader Richard T. Frankensteen looked to organization of the 15,000 workers at Consolidated Aircraft Corporation as "our immediate objective" and said the CIO-UAW planned to organize wherever there is an aircraft plant on the west coast."

Rumania Uprising Quelled

Balkan dispatches Tuesday night had reported Sima was going to Berlin.

Advices from the Rumanian general staff, the legation said, declared that "not a single soldier or officer" had joined rebellious Iron Guardsmen who were blamed for the disorders.

The legation acknowledged "many" deaths and said the Bucharest government had been advised that "notorious Communists and very young Legionnaires were behind the rebellion."

"These rebels occupied the Bucharest and Brasov radio stations, the Bucharest post office and several public institutions in Bucharest, Ploesti and Braila," the legation said.

"Yesterday 600 Legionnaires, organized by General George Petrovicescu, massed in front of the premier's office and started firing at the building with machine-guns.

"(Premier) Antonescu decided that was sufficient. He instructed the army and police to re-establish order. They quickly cleanout public buildings throughout the country.

"These Communists and very young Legionnaires surrendered in a body, weeping and openly expressing their disgust with themselves x x x"

Second Contingent of Selective Service Trainees From County Is Honored

delicious chicken dinner served by the American Legion Auxiliary.

After first expressing the regrets of Chairman Ed Lowrey, who is out of town and unable to attend the dinner, Mr. Kinnear told the conscriptees that the committee, as well as all the people throughout the county, are interested in them and their army careers and wished them success in their work. He then introduced Lt. Swanson.

Burgess R. W. Steber then brought a message to the boys as official representative of the borough of Warren, expressing the affection of the people for those who are entering the service and the appreciation of what the trainees are doing for the country.

R. W. Mackay spoke on behalf of the committee, wishing the young men good luck on their undertaking. Greetings from the American Legion were brought by Commander Nick Wendelboe and from the Veterans of Foreign Wars by Commander J. R. Alien.

A special guest at the dinner was Capt. Graff, of Erie, Selective Service inspector of the state. He spoke briefly.

Mr. Kinnear also introduced members of the draft boards and other local officials connected with the Selective Service.

Each of the trainees was presented with a gift by the committee, consisting of a carton of cigarettes, candy and gum. The candy and gum were donated by E. M. Hutchens and Son.

Following the dinner, a short program of entertainment was enjoyed.

Trainees from Local Board No. 1 who attended the dinner include Melvin M. Morgach, R. D. 1, Youngsville; Tony F. Geniètto, 200 Walnut street, Warren; Harold L. Wineriter, 509 Water street, Warren; Charles T. Hildum, 669 Beech street, Warren; George H. Jerman, 112 Parker street, Warren; Albert L. Anderson, R. D. 2, Warren, and Louis A. Rich, 507 Lexington avenue, Warren.

Those from Local Board No. 2 in attendance were Jay L. Smith, of Sugar Grove; William Alfred Watson, 16 Eddy street, Warren, and Robert Sandeen, of Akeley. Sandeen, recently transferred here from Wilkes-Barre, replaced Ralph E. Loomis, of R. D. 3, Sugar Grove, on the list. Unable to attend were Woodrow W. Rutter, R. D. 1, Grand Valley; Loyal L. McAvoy, R. D. 1, Tidioute, and William G. Byer, R. D. 1, Youngsville.

The trainees will leave tomorrow morning at 10:50 o'clock by bus for Pittsburgh. Members of the Citizens Committee plan to be on hand at that time to bid farewell to the youths.

During October, 1940, 5,560,709 automotive pneumatic casings were shipped. Of this number 140,025 were exported.

Western Outpost for U. S. Defense?

With eastern defenses bolstered by bases strung from Newfoundland to South America, Uncle Sam turns eyes westward, 1000 miles out into the Pacific to the lonely Galapagos Islands, owned by Ecuador. Deal was recently reported whereby Ecuador would cooperate with the U. S. in building air and naval bases on the islands which guard Pacific approach to Panama Canal. Above is a view of barren, rock-bantered beach at Charles Island, one of the group.

YEAR OF REAPPORTIONMENT

Government is machinery. Naturally, the purposes for which the machinery is used come first. The direction in which it is set going, the fuel and upkeep in the form of taxes and other support—all these are of first importance.

But there is another matter, less dramatic and interesting, but also important—the redesign and replacement of worn-out parts in the machine itself. That is the way you might describe the congressional reapportionment due in 1941.

The Constitution provides that each 10 years, when the census is taken, the President shall report its results to Congress, which shall then determine the number of representatives each state shall have, "according to their respective numbers." The only restrictions are that each state must have at least one representative, and that their total shall not exceed one for every 30,000 people.

Obviously, if Congress were to have one member for every 30,000 people today, it would have more than 4300 members. To cut down the size of the House, the present arrangement is based on about one for every 250,000—435 members for something over 100,000,000 people.

The present census will show close to 132,000,000 people. If the same proportion of representatives to population were to be kept, it would mean a House of Representatives of more than 500 members. If the House is kept the same size, it would mean that each member will be representing more than 300,000 people.

Certainly, the House of Representatives, with 435 members, is large enough—if anything, it is too large. Many students of government believe it would work better with fewer members, and that the quality of members would improve if each had to convince a larger block of district voters of his worth.

All this puts Congress in the unhappy position of a surgeon about to operate on himself. It always does this with reluctance. In fact, the reluctance was so great in 1921 that it violated the Constitution by failing to do it at all.

Despite all the grave major problems that face Congress in 1941, reapportionment must not be neglected. Congress must demonstrate that it can keep the machinery of government itself in repair; it must have the courage to make an apportionment of its membership which will not increase the total, but decrease it if possible. Perhaps that is a good deal to expect, but there must surely at this time be no repetition of the failure of 1921 to carry out a clear constitutional mandate.

SAUCE FOR THE GANDER

There has been considerable agitation of late because propaganda from Germany circulates freely through the U. S. mails as a result of a postal convention between the two countries.

Since this country is dedicated to freedom—and since freedom to propagandize is hard to distinguish from [illegible] freedom to speak and write—there has been reluctance to deny the use of the mails to this flood of material, most of which consists of leaflets and letters brought across [illegible] and Japan to the United States [illegible] delivered through the U. S. mails.

But [illegible] sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Why not flood the German mails with a wave of anti-dictatorship literature, and see whether it is promptly [illegible]. If it is not, then the convention [illegible], and will no longer be binding.

TWO REFUGEES

[illegible] about immigrants and refugees [illegible] and whether it is good for [illegible].

Knudsen, the Danish boy who [illegible] in this new land and [illegible] Sidney Hillman, the Lithuanian boy who [illegible] because of oppression in his native [illegible] the United States [illegible] almost as [illegible] today.

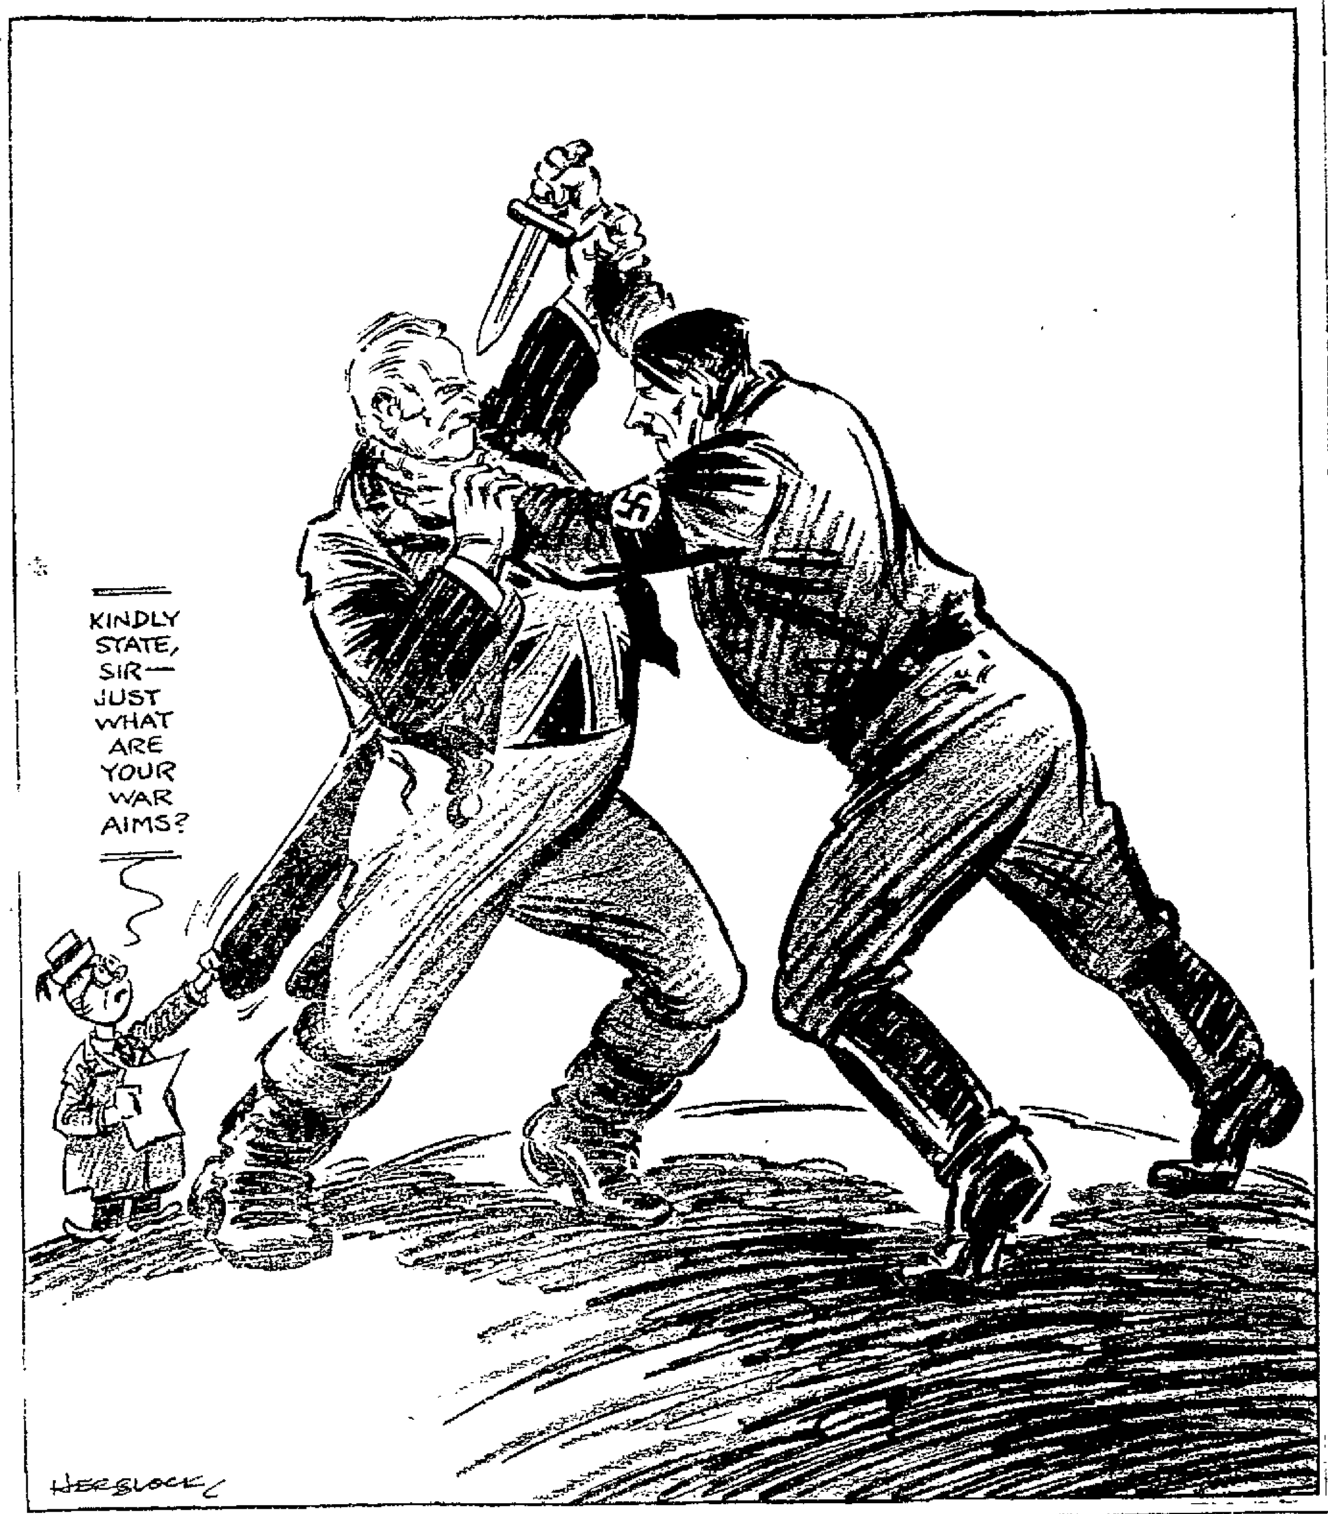
Now, There's a Timely Question!



KINDLY STATE, SIR—JUST WHAT ARE YOUR WAR AIMS?
HERBLOCK

YOUR NATION'S CAPITOL

By Bruce Catton

The Times-Mirror Washington Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 23—Washington never saw a vice president like Henry A. Wallace before. The town has had eight years to get acquainted, but it isn't entirely onto him even yet.

Vice presidents who get interested in abstract ideas aren't new, but there never was one who would put his teeth into an idea and shake it to pieces the way Wallace does. A sample is his famous experience with the boomerangs.

When he was Secretary of Agriculture Wallace used to walk most of the way to work, leaving his suite in the Wardman Park hotel and swinging down through Rock Creek Park. Jim Le Cron, his assistant, used to walk with him. To get a little exercise as they walked, the two used to carry a bag of golf balls, throwing them ahead and picking them up as they reached them. One morning Le Cron showed up with a couple of boomerangs to vary the game.

Wallace not only took to throwing boomerangs; he got interested in the theory of boomerangs, studied them carefully, drew up air-foil sections and calculated just how a boomerang could be improved. Finally he had some made to his own design out of plastic—producing, probably, the most effective boomerang ever seen. Having done all of this, he lost all interest in boomerangs. He had milked the subject of its last drop of intellectual interest and then he was through with it.

His absorption in French poodles is another angle of the same thing. The Agriculture Department's experiment station at Beltsville, Md., a year or more ago set out to improve the breed of sheep dogs, centering its attention mostly on a Hungarian strain. Walace heard that the French poodle is one of the most intelligent of all dogs. He verified the theory, saw that this particular kind of poodle is a rangy, long-legged animal well out of the ordinary lap-dog class, and immediately had a number of poodles entered in the experiment station's "class."

This work is still in progress and still holds his interest. His primary idea of course was to find or develop a dog that would be a better helper to the shepherd; but he was also intensely interested in abstruse things like the inheritance of intelligence factors, and he had a whole series of cross-breeding experiments started—seeking, among other things, to see what sort of canine gray matter would result if a French poodle were crossed with one of the famous "Seeing Eye" shepherd dogs.

Wallace is a queer mixture of the abstruse and the intensely practical. He is generally looked on as a mystic, although his closest friends say he is actually a profound realist.

Politicians for a long time have had him pegged as a hard man to talk to. Small talk doesn't come easily to him. He doesn't drink, doesn't play cards, doesn't go hunting and fishing, and a man who can't even talk about those things is likely to strike politicians as a queer fish, and a bit of a highbrow besides.

On top of this, Wallace has a way of concentrating sharply on

From present indications there will be no relief from the house famine which has been acute in Warren for several months. The natural growth of a community is from five to ten per cent annually while the increase in the number of dwellings during the past year has not been one per cent. Youngest Republic Pays For German 'Protection'

SLOVAKIA, youngest republic to emerge from German reorganization of Europe, is paying for the protective might of Nazi war lords. The forests of Slovakia, pictured on the stamp above, are going into German mills to provide the cellulose so necessary in Hitler's wartime economic system.

Practically all the resources of this tiny nation, which covers only 14,000 square miles, have been taken over by the "protectors." Its mines yield iron, lignite, gold and silver. Many of its own steel mills have been closed because of the German demand. Germany pays in reichmarks.

Slovakia came into existence the same day Czechoslovakia disappeared from the maps. The republic declared its independence the day Germany invaded Bohemia, March 14, 1939, won a promise from Hitler guaranteeing frontiers for 25 years.

The area's rich resources have been a prize for every European conqueror. Even the Turks held the district for some time. Hungary controlled the province for a thousand years, until the World War peace treaties incorporated it into Czechoslovakia.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

Ballads and Ballots

Music often plays an important part as words in any election campaign and many a candidate has received as much push toward the presidency from his campaign song as from his speeches. Both parties united on "God Bless America" in the recent campaign, but how many of this tune's campaign predecessors do you recall?

1. What defeated presidential candidate campaigned with "Side-Walks of New York?"

2. What did the candidates that used "Hot Time in the Old Town" and "Happy Days Are Here Again" have in common?

3. In what campaign was "Tippecanoe and Tyler Too" used?

4. What song states that the candidate "came out of the wilderness?"

5. What Republican candidate used a Stephen Foster song as a campaign tune during the past decade?

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The legal profession may be no super-highway to fame and fortune, but it still is the best route to Congress—and by far.

The legal profession accounts for less than one per cent of the working male population over 21 years old, but for a long time now, it has accounted for from 65 to more than 70 per cent of Congress.

I have just been checking over the 77th — the brand new one. Seventy-two per cent of the senate is made up of the sons of Blackstone. Of the 96 senators, 70 are lawyers; only 26 are from other professions. You couldn't expect me to do research on all the 435 members of the House, but I did enough of that scientific cross-section sampling you read about to be able to report that the House follows almost the same pattern.

Next in line are the newspaper men, God bless 'em—who number six—or seven if you count one former practicing attorney who now is editor and publisher of a newspaper.

Minnesota's new senator, Joseph H. Ball, and Massachusetts' Henry Cabot Lodge jr. came right out of the working press and both still write Washington comment for their papers. Arkansas' Hattie W. Caraway is, of course, the Senate's only housewife; Minnesota's Shipstead, its only dentist, Vermont's Senator Aiken is a nurseryman; Washington's Mon C. Wallgren a jeweler and optician (and incidentally the three-cushion billard champ of Everett, Wash.). Senator Byrd of Virginia is an apple grower (and newspaper publisher); and Oregon's Rufus C. Holman a paper-box manufacturer. And so it goes.

No Senate Doctors

WHEN the Senate is assembled, there's not a doctor on the floor, but there are several in the House. For example, there are the 71-year-old veteran Dr. Fred J. Douglas, of Utica, N. Y., and Dr. Joseph L. Pfeifer, of Brooklyn, both prominent surgeons in their own communities, both still practicing, and the latter chief of staff of one of the better known Brooklyn hospitals. And there is Dr. Rudolph G. Tenerowicz, of Hamtramck in Detroit, Mich. There is hardly a week that Dr. Tenerowicz doesn't fly to Detroit to bring a baby into the world or help some ailing patient avoid going out of it.

Still, it is the legal profession that rides the gravy train. Just why seems pretty obvious on the surface. Primarily, the reason is based on that dubious premise that men who spend their lives fighting over the laws of the land should be best equipped to make them. I say "dubious" because the argument as to whether lawyers are good lawmakers is even older than our constitutional government.

As far back as 1776, John Adams saw our "representative assembly" as "an exact portrait, in miniature, of the people at large," and Alexander Hamilton followed him a few years later with a similar concept.

Luce Had His Opinion

ROBERT LUCE of Massachusetts, who served for 20 years as a member of the lower house, and was considered one of the most scholarly of congressmen, had this to say: "Lawyers are liable to be poor lawmakers because their mental habit is backward-looking. Their whole training has taught them to rely on precedent. They worship the past. This has its advantages, but among them is not the facility for meeting present needs and anticipating tomorrow."

Don't try to get me into the argument. I'm just telling you how it is today and how it looks for tomorrow—if you want to get your boy into congress, see your lawyer—about a law school.

Magic Spring

by ALLEN EPPES

YESTERDAY: David Wiley wants three things very much. He wants to marry Polly Jenkins. He wants to restore his little cousin Peter to health. And he wants to rehabilitate "Freddy's Folly," which is the old inn and mineral spring left him by his Aunt Julia. Now the visit of Dr. Warren McNeill to Ardendale gives him hope for the latter at the same time Margo Powers seems about to interfere in his romance with Polly. The four are on a picnic at the inn.

Chapter 21

Margo's Puzzle

"I DON'T think Warren's the sort of man to let his family go hungry," said Polly. "Mind getting those four cups out of the basket I brought? They're odds and ends, but good enough for picnics."

Margo found the cups. She was placing them on a board near the oven when the two men joined them.

"Boy, does that coffee smell good!" Warren said.

"Ready for me to broil the hot dogs?" David asked.

"Yes," said Polly. "And don't waste any time. I feel as though I could eat six of them myself."

"And where," Warren asked, looking at Polly's small form, "would you put them?"

"Maybe I've got a hollow leg!" said Polly.

Soon the meal was in full swing. The sun disappeared. An afterglow filled the sky. An indescribable peace settled over the scene.

Warren got out his cigarettes. He passed them around.

Soon they were all smoking, relaxed about the remains of the picnic supper.

"Get your banjo, David," said Polly.

"Yes, do," Warren urged. "Let's do some singing. I haven't done any in ages."

"Do you know any negro spirituals?" David asked.

"I used to. Let's see! Oh, how about the one about 'standing in the need of prayer?'"

"It's a favorite of mine," said David.

"Mine, too," said Polly. "Then let's see if we can remember 'Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party'—You know that one, don't you, Margo?"

"I think so," Margo answered. "I have a faint recollection of singing it in public school."

"Of course!" said Polly. "We had it once when we gave an entertainment."

David got up. "Swell!" he said. "We'll sing ourselves back into the good old horse and buggy days."

"Which," said Warren with a touch of wistfulness, "weren't bad days, by any means. More intimacy and friendliness then—and not so much mechanism. People got together and did things—danced, sang, played games, contributed bits of talent; and now—well, all people do now is sit around with their mouths open listening to a lot of asininity that comes over the air. They don't even read any more. Just sit and sit and sit—and never use their brains or their hands."

"You sound," said Margo, "as though you had lived your life during those horse and buggy days."

"No," said Warren, "I came along a little too late for them. But just the same, I sometimes wish that I had lived then."

"That's another thing we agree on, Warren," said David. He started for his car. "I'll get the banjo, and we'll pretend we're back when ladies wore rats in their hair, and men's shoes had buttons."

An hour passed, two hours, three.

The four young people sat underneath the old apple tree and sang—tried this old song, that old one. Then they did some things that were more modern.

"No use," said David: "they just don't go with a banjo."

"No," said Warren, "they need silly-looking men tooting crazy-looking horns with plug hats stuck on them. A banjo was meant for songs that have feeling—meaning—sentiment."

Indecision

MARGO was oddly quiet.

She had been watching Warren closely, watching David the same way. Two such handsome men, and with such old fashioned ideas. To hear them talk, you'd think the modern world had nothing at all to offer. Both of them apparently perfectly content to go on living in a town like Ardendale. And Warren was waiting for her to make up her mind about marrying him; waiting, while she hesitated, wondering, and not a little worried. Warren McNeill. David Wiley.

"Let's sing the one about all God's chillun having shoes," said Polly, "and then we'd better clear up this mess and go home."

David began to strum the banjo once more.

His voice, Warren's, and Polly's blended nicely. Margo did not join. She said she didn't know the words.

"Then hum," said Warren.

"I'm an awful hummer," said Margo.

Warren reached over and took one of Margo's hands.

"Isn't this a lot nicer than the Riviera?" he said.

"No," said Margo, "I don't think so."

"I do," said Warren. And he released the hand he was holding.

Polly sprang to her feet. She busied herself gathering up the soiled dishes. The others helped her. Then when David had poured water on the fire, they went back to the cars.

Soon they were headed for Ardendale.

David drove slowly, but Margo, at the wheel of her yellow roadster, did not. She and Warren sped on ahead.

"Acts as though she were going to a fire," David said.

Polly did not answer. But presently she said: "She's in love with you. You know that, don't you?"

"What in heck are you talking about?" David said, startled.

"You and Margo. She's in love with you. That's easy enough to see."

"Listen, Polly—don't talk nonsense," said David. "Margo's going to marry Warren."

"What makes you so sure?"

"I know Warren. He'll win her sooner or later."

"Not if Margo won't say yes. He can't carry her off by the hair of the head."

"Maybe he ought to," said David. "Margo's beautiful, she her charming moments—but she's just not all there. I mean, she seems to miss so many things that are worthwhile. Like singing those old songs—not really feeling what's back of them."

"She's confused," said Polly. "She's fond of Warren, but she can't make up her mind—because of you."

"Is that woman's intuition?" said David. "Margo's the sort of girl who likes men—and—"

"And she likes you especially," said Polly. She waited a moment, and then went on: "I've done a lot of thinking while I was in that ticket booth. David—and I realize how much a girl like Margo could do for you and Peter."

"You're talking crazier and crazier," said David. "But go on—get it out of your system."

"Margo has money, and she'll have more when her father dies," said Polly. "She could supply the necessary means for putting the Inn in condition—send Peter to the finest of specialists. There's no limit to what she could do. While I—"

"Yes, while you?"

"Oh, David, don't you see what I'm trying to get at?" Polly wailed.

"No. It looks to me like you're trying to find a polite way of showing me the gate; or trying to push me down Margo Powers' throat."

"You're hopeless!" said Polly.

"I'd say you were the one who's hopeless," David retorted. "Are you honestly trying to ditch me—trying to marry me off to Margo?"

Quarrel

"CERTAINLY not. I'm only trying to make you see that it will mean a lot more to you to marry her, than me—"

"I get it!" said David. "Trying to be a martyr."

"I'm not!"

"Trying to be the self-sacrificing little heroine of our love story," David went on. "If you don't want to marry me, Polly, why don't you come right out and say so?"

"It's not that, David. It's only that—"

"Maybe you're falling for Warren," David rushed on. "I've seen how you hang breathlessly on his every word—"

"David!"

"Don't think I'm jealous," David said. "I'm not. I'd hate to lose you, but darned if I'd put up too much of a fight, if Warren was the other man. I like him. He's a swell fellow."

"So you'd just calmly sit by and let me walk off with Warren!" said Polly. "Is that it?"

"Of course not, Polly! I only meant—"

"Oh, it doesn't matter," said Polly. "Let's not quarrel, like a couple of children. Can't you drive a little faster?"

"I can drive a lot faster," said David, "if you're bored."

"Then do," said Polly. "I've got to get home and fix Aunt Susan's hot water bottle."

"You and your everlasting hot water bottles!" said David angrily.

Polly looked at him. She started to make a cutting retort, but changed her mind.

"Good night, David," Polly said at her gate. "Thanks for a grand time."

"Well, you needn't be sarcastic," said David.

"I wasn't," said Polly. And then: "My, you are touchy here of late."

"And why shouldn't I be, I'd like to know!" snapped David. "What with you talking a lot of nonsense about another girl being in love with me, and refusing to make up your mind about going through with our marriage."

"I'm not going through with our marriage," said Polly, "until I'm sure you know just what you want."

"I've known I wanted you ever since we were kids."

"But that was before Margo got back."

"Margo — Margo — Margo!" David said. "I'm sick of hearing you say the name. Good night." He got back into his car. "If it'll make you any happier, I'll find out for sure just how Margo feels about me."

"I wish you would!" Polly said.

David released the clutch. He drove off without looking back. When he reached the Wiley cottage he went in as quietly as possible. But Peter heard him.

"That you, Cousin David?" he called out. And David detected excitement in the boy's voice.

"Yes, Peter. I thought you were asleep."

"Cousin David, I walked—I walked."

The bride is a graduate of Warren High School in the class of 1931 and of the Warren General Hospital training school in 1934. She has been in San Antonio for the past three years.

Opening—♥ Q. 23

BY WM. E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

At every tournament you are sure to see some player off in a corner, muttering to himself over a hand, "Well, maybe I am wrong. Nobody else would bid a club." You will always see players running around with a hand written on the back of a score card, asking "What would you bid on this hand?"

When you tell them what you would bid, they start an argument, so my answer always is, "What would YOU bid on it?"

Here is one hand that caused lots of arguments as to what to bid originally. At the tables where the bidding started with one club and ended in three no trump, West opened hearts. After the seven of hearts lead, the defense cashed five tricks at once.

With the queen of hearts opening, some defenders gave declarer his contract by letting the ten-spot make. One West player, after the three top honors had gone on the first trick and a return lead had been won by his seven, had the iron nerve to switch to diamonds. East thus got in for a second heart lead and the contract was set.

Where South opened the bidding with one heart, West did not open the suit against no trump. Declarer made game because on the parade of eight black tricks, West did not guess that he must discard diamonds instead of hearts.

Government Survey Lines Up Many Fish Recipes for Homemakers Planning After-Holiday Meals, Says Mrs. Mabel Bowen

Dear Friends in Warren:

Tired of turkey? Federal experts of the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior today have come to the aid of the homemakers who are swamped by the daily problem of planning post-season "tired-of-turkey" meals.

The service has been conducting a nation-wide survey in the interest of the busy homemaker and states that "there is an abundance of species of fish and shellfish available in our markets from which the housewife may select to add variety and substantial food value to the family table.

In other words, every state has its winter-time fish specialties which should be used more frequently on the table to add valuable food elements to menus, as well as interest and variety.

In the Nation's Capital, croaker or hardhead, the little speckled brown 1½ pounder [illegible] other species during the holidays and January. Only a [illegible] fa- ller away," Baltimore see [illegible] and for the squeteague [illegible] fish sometimes called [illegible] trout. Down Richmond, Virginia way they also select the croaker as well as the king [illegible] folk to be different [illegible] flounders and pompanos [illegible] as fillet of sole."

In and around Washington [illegible] the croaker in what is [illegible] the Chesapeake Bay Stew. [illegible] calls for a medium-sized croaker (about 1½ pounds), cleaned and gashed crosswise through to backbone, potatoes sliced crosswise and rather thin, onion salt and pepper to taste. And only enough water to produce sufficient steam for cooking, which does not require much [illegible].

Savannah puts whiting at the top of the list, and probably fries or sautees them. In Atlanta, as well as in Birmingham, Alabama, the croaker again is No. 1 fish. In Columbia, S. C., the hardhead and mullet tie for first place. In Tennessee, Memphis selects the buffalofish, with catfish and groupers the runners-up. Groupers, a prettily mottled fish, are a favorite in the South, excellent for baking whole, as steaks or as fillets.

Nashville favors oysters, and is likely to serve them grilled, in this manner: One pint of select oysters. Place 1 to 2 tablespoons butter in a hot pan. When it smokes, drop in the oysters, a few at a time. When they are browned, remove to a hot dish and pour over them a sauce made of melted butter, thickened with flour. Minced parsley may be added when sauce is removed from heat. Season with table sauce, salt and cayenne. Serve on toast, garnished with parsley.

Mobile, Alabama, takes red snapper — a handsome fish with red scales known as the "quality" fish of the South. Small snappers may be broiled. However most desired market sizes are 6 to 10 pounds. It is on the fishery for this species that Pensacola bases its title, "The Gloucester of the South." Orientals consider red snapper a "lucky" fish. Japanese in Seattle, Washington, send all the way to Pensacola, Fla. for red snapper to serve as a "luck bringing" dish at their New Year feast. Excellence of red snapper as a baking fish is almost without parallel.

In baking red snapper or a bland fish in which flavor should be accented, add ½ tablespoon anchovy paste to the stuffing. Sliced cucumbers in French dressing are popular as an accompaniment for baked or broiled fish.

In New Orleans, it is shrimp — with squeteaque the favorite wintertime fish. Shrimp support the most important fishery industry on the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts and shrimp canning is the most important seafood canning industry of the south.

Why not surprise the family with French-fried shrimp for a luncheon or dinner surprise treat? Prepared with pure shortening, fried shrimps are tender, digestible, delicious. You will need:

French-Fried Shrimp

1½ pounds green shrimp
2 eggs
Juice 2 lemons
Salt, pepper
Sifted cracker crumbs
Hot shortening.

Peel shrimp, wash and remove sand vein. Place them in a bowl with lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste and allow them to stand (marinate) 15 minutes. Heat shortening 350-400 degrees F. Beat the eggs. Dip shrimp in eggs and then roll in crumbs. Place a single layer in frying basket and cook 3 minutes. (Rub basket first with shortening.)

"Pepper Pan Roast"

The native oyster of the Pacific coast—the Olympia oyster, is very much smaller in size than the Atlantic coast oyster. Some food experts claim they have the finest flavor of any oyster in the United States. They are utilized to a large extent in cocktails and in stews. Pepper pan roast is made this way.

1 cup catsup
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon table sauce
Salt and paprika
1 teaspoon flour
1 pint oysters
Toast or crackers.

Blend catsup, butter, mustard, sauce and seasonings over low heat. Thicken with the flour. Add oysters. Place on back of stove, or over very low heat to plump oysters. Serve on crisp toast or crackers. Serves 4.

Another favorite west coast recipe for oysters is called the "Hangtown Fry."

It simply mixes 2 plain scrambled eggs with 1 dozen small fried Olympia oysters. Remember that oysters, like other salt water fish, have an abundance of iodine content.

During the holidays, Boston deserts the traditional cod for haddock, mackerel and flounders are close behind as winter favorites. Cod apparently is prime favorite in neighboring Bridgeport, Conn., concludes the government survey. Mackerel is the fish for Fall River, Mass.

"Down Easters" are particularly fond of chowders and Majorie Mosser in her "Good Maine Food" gives this recipe:

Fish Chowder

1 cod
1 haddock
3 quarts cold water
¼ pound salt pork, sliced thin
2 onions, sliced thin
6 potatoes, cut thin
6 common crackers
½ cup butter.
2 tablespoons flour
1 quart rich milk
Salt and pepper.

Skin fish and remove bones. Boil heads and bones in water with a pinch of salt. Cut fish in pieces 4 inches square; wash, dry, and dredge with flour. Fry pork slowly until brown; add sliced or diced onions and brown over low heat. Place brown pork in bottom of a deep saucepan, add a layer of fried onions, fish, potatoes, salt and pepper and dredge in a little flour. Continue until all ingredients are used.

Strain water in which heads and bones were boiling over the fish. If not enough water to cover add hot water. Split common crackers and put them over the top. Boil 30 minutes. Rub flour and butter together and add to fish. Add milk, boil up once and serve. Have on hand a reserve of common crackers moistened in hot milk and serve a few with each helping of chowder.

MRS. MABEL BOWEN.

BUILDING DEDICATION

Philadelphia, Jan. 23—(AP)—The city's big $3,390,000 municipal court building, first proposed in 1917, but held up by lack of funds, will be dedicated today. It brings together under one roof all the various branches of the juvenile and domestic relations divisions of the court.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

whatever topic happens to strike his interest the most. It often happens that a caller will start him on one chain of thought and will switch to another without taking Wallace along with him—and will realize, several minutes later, that Wallace just hasn't been listening to him.

Such traits will make it hard for him in his new job, in which intimate conversations with a great number of intensely practical politicians will play an important part. But Wallace is no political innocent—after all, he dealt with Congress pretty successfully during his eight years as Secretary of Agriculture—and he does like people. Incidentally, one of his best friends is Ed Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

When he first came to Washington he disliked official functions. Then he discovered that the endless round of banquets, dinner parties and "at homes" are very important to a cabinet minister. Learning this, his intellectual curiosity made him want to find out the how and why of that importance. Since then he has been about as deep in the social round as any member of the cabinet.

This still hasn't developed his ability to make small talk. They tell of one dinner party at which his hostess saw him sitting in silence all through the evening, and despaired that anyone present could make him talk. Finally, though, she saw him in animated conversation with some young sprig. Eager to know what subject had at last stirred his interest, she sidled over—to find Wallace and the young sprig deep in a chat about Iowa hogs.

Wallace likes many games, but he likes to play them, not to watch them, and hasn't gone to a professional game as a spectator for years. He plays tennis and badminton, and enjoys long walks. He is fond of picking up new games, but he doesn't go for cards. He reads a great deal, but it's mostly pretty deep stuff—genetics, mathematics, economics, the history of civilizations, comparative religions, and so on.

His interest in experiments has led him to try out various kinds of diets. When in college he lived for a time on soy beans, just to see what the result would be. For a number of years he was a vegetarian, although he has since given that up.

FIRST WATER POWER MILL

The first water power mill in America was established at South Berwick, Maine, in 1620, by Ferdinando Gorges, who obtained a grant from England empowering him to develop water power on the land lying between the 40th and 48th latitudes from sea to sea.

Around New York

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The plan to liquidate the bulk of William Randolph Hearst's art treasures across the bargain counters of two of Manhattan's largest department stores — Gimbel Bros. and Saks Fifth Ave.—is probably the most astonishing, yet logical solution that could have been devised. The shopping public will have the pleasure of fingering and mulling over medieval pewter plates, Egyptian mummies, 14th century dirks, and costly items such as rare agate bowls, stones and gems

But what I wish to call attention to is the famed Sacramenia, which is an ancient Spanish Cistercian monastery and which is all ready for delivery in the event any purchaser has a sudden desire to own such a property. This monastery was founded in the 12th century by Alfonso VII, and at the time it was acquired by Mr. Hearst his agents had it knocked down and packed into 14,000 separate crates, each weighing 500 lbs. It's all there, every stick and stone, waiting to be reassembled and set up as some gigantic jig-saw or block puzzle. No definite value has been placed on this item as yet, but it is said that $50,000 would come close to closing the deal.

IT HAS seemed to me that anyone purchasing a 12th century monastery would also be interested in a bell that has come into this country since the end of the recent Spanish Civil war. It is a small bronze bell that belonged to a convent in Madrid and was used only for the purpose of calling the nuns to evening prayer. When the fighting swarmed about Madrid this convent was destroyed and a friend succeeded in wrenching the bell from its cement moorings and sending it to Benito Collada, at 80 Grove street, in New York's Greenwich Village.

This is the site of El Chico, which is unquestionably the best Spanish restaurant in town, and there it is used every night as the signal to start and to close the floor show.

I do not know whether Collada would be interested in parting with this treasure or not; probably he wouldn't But if you are there and would like to see it, he will be glad to show it to you and, perhaps, even permit you to serve as the starter for that particular show.

THE next time you slam your hand in a door, you may howl with pain, but there's no need to cuss yourself for stupidity. I encountered a taxi driver recently who was lamenting about a broken ankle. How did it happen? "Twenty years I'm drivin' a cab," he said, "—and I go and slam my foot in the door."

The Globe, a small theater in Times Square, having run the gamut of institutional vicissitudes delineated by George Kaufman in his play "The Fabulous Invalid," is apparently starting over again. Built originally as a legitimate theater, it declined during the depression depths to burlesque, then to movies. Now the word is that it may become a legitimate theater again.

In addition to entertaining more than 100 students and instructors here to participate in the three-day band festival of the Northwest District Pennsylvania State Music Association, Warren will be host on Friday and Saturday to another 300 young people who are attending the annual mid-winter institute of Epworth Leagues of the Jamestown District.

This group is convening in the First Methodist church with Grace and Epworth churches cooperating. Delegations will register from four until six o'clock Friday afternoon after which all will attend the institute banquet.

From 7:30 to 8:00 there will be a free period when members will have an opportunity of completing their registrations. The next half hour will be devoted to the first class period and at 8:45 o'clock all will assemble in the church sanctuary for an address on "Work Among the Migrants" to be delivered by the Rev. John A. Petzer of Madison N. J. and illustrated with pictures of his activities. At the close of this service delegates will go to the homes assigned them for entertainment.

The Saturday schedule will begin at 8:15 o'clock with a twenty-minute morning worship led by Rev. Delbert Jolley of Ripley N. Y. son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Jolley of Water street.

The second class period will be from 8:40 until 9:20 followed by a free period ending at 9:40. Dr. John A. Galbraith, of Jamestown, N. Another free period will follow until 11:25 when the fourth class period will be conducted.

Luncheon will be at 12:15 o'clock, with the final class period convening at 1:30 and lasting until 2:10. From 2:15 until 3:00 there will be a convention gathering after which the group will again be free until the assembly at 3:15 for a final service. At this time Rev. Jolley will deliver the closing challenge of the two-day session

About 50 league units throughout the section will be represented in the 300 delegates who will come here for the classes of this inspirational institute. Eve Curie Here For Lecture Tour

Pointing out Britain's urgent need of additional shipping, Eve Curie, daughter of the famed discoverer of radium, declared: "There is no use in this tremendous production of supplies without transportation and I don't think the British can keep on forever transporting all this to Europe in their own ships." Her comment was made when, as pictured above, she recently landed in New York from London, for a lecture tour.

Presidential Letter of Introduction

It's not every one who can get a letter of introduction from the President. But Wendell Willkie, the President's erstwhile rival office, [illegible] and Mr. Roosevelt see pretty much eye-to-eye on aid to Britain. So Mr. Willkie sails for London with the longhand note to "Dear Churchill" he's pictured reading, above, in Washington after President Roosevelt gave it to him in their recent conference. It's [illegible] "To a certain, [illegible] person Kindness of W. Willkie."

The man first tried to take his own life Monday by plunging an ice-pick into his chest, Rothrock said. Although the tip of the pick touched his heart, he survived.

SPORT SPATTERINGS

by BILL RICE

When the Dragons invade St. Marys tomorrow night to tackle the dangerous Flying Dutchmen, two of the locals will be playing their final game in Warren High School livery. Cliff Graham, letterman on the 1939-40 squad, and Gail Templeton will hang up their blue and white togs after the tilt with the Dutch, due to the semester ruling. Of course, Coach Kolpien has been more seriously handicapped at mid-term, but the loss of Graham and Templeton will be keenly felt. Cliff is a great ball hawk and has the ability to follow the leather no matter where it takes him, and occasionally flashes through with baskets when the heat is on. When Templeton steps off the squad, the Dragon mentor will be losing a crack shot, a first string reserve and a man whose experience has made him especially valuable to the team. One quality which both men have, and which is a big help to any club, is that old "try" and spirit. Nice going, boys we'll miss you.

It will not be necessary for Kolpien to start a rebuilding process as was the case last year when Buster Brown, Ken Christiansen, "Bud" Hingst, Bill Lundahl and Jim Greenlund went out of action. Nevertheless, the squad will be a bit short on replacements who have had [illegible] under fire. "Chuck" Hoffecker will probably move up to Graham's forward to pair with Conroy, Pick will remain at center and Tucker and "Sling" Brown will be in there at guards. That leaves only Martin Smith and "Bob" Hansen from last year's second team. Don Sharp appears to have first call to move up to the varsity and another man will be chosen from the reserve squad of Buerkle, Black, Lunquist, Nel[illegible] Wright and Urbanski. Kane and Sheffield will give Kolpien an opportunity to give the candidates a chance to strut their stuff before the beginning of the second half.

A report of the Jamestown Citizens' Committee, in charge of and the moving light in the construction of that city's new municipal stadium, estimates that the field and stands are going to cost about $61,-000. Broken down, the total was derived from the following sources: The City provided $24,000 for the stand, painting, electrical and plumbing work, $2,000 for grading and has added $27,000 in its new budget; the Citizens Committee donated $3,500 for the property, $1,500 for some lumber and $3,000 for grading and seeding. The figures show that $34,000 has already been spent, of which $8,000 was raised by public subscription. Charles L. Strandburg, director of public works, said yesterday that it is hoped to have the site ready by May 1 when the Pony League opens. Lighting equipment costing $11,000 will be installed. Meanwhile, matters are about the same locally, but it is hoped that when weather permits, the metal fence which will enclose three-fourths of Russell Field, will be on hand and ready to put up. Our guess, however, is that the barrier will be ready probably about mid-summer and available only for football in 1941.

January 23, 1921 — A "blind" tournament was held at the Elks last Saturday afternoon, a curtain being hung in front of pins so that they could not be seen by the bowlers and the standing pins called out by an announcer. January 23, 1931 — Harry Lord had a big night in the City Basketball League last evening, scoring 23 points to lead the Yes Gas to a [illegible]-32 victory over the Alpha Gamma Sigma fraternity. Fritz Ebel and Myron Jewell chucked in a dozen points apiece for the frat.

Tribe Prexy Resents Claim That Newsom Is Highest Paid Hurler

Cleveland, Jan. 23—(AP)—Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland Indians, maintains that Bob Feller is the highest-paid pitcher in the history of baseball despite Detroit's claims for Buck Newsom.

Methods of bookkeeping may have something to do with it.

Neither club would disclose exact figures, but here is how they stack up today:

Feller received a salary last year generally believed to have been $27,000. His bonuses and income from endorsements added something like $10,000 more.

Newsom was paid $30,000 last year including bonuses, said Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Tigers.

"And he has signed his 1941 contract," Briggs added, indicating a raise in salary although nothing was said on that score. The most optimistic estimates placed the top possibility at $35,000.

To this, Bradley retorted: "Bob Feller is still the highest-paid pitcher in baseball; he was the highest-paid last year too."

To the assumption that Newsom's 1941 contract must call for more than $30,000, Bradley snapped: "So does Bob's. Feller still is the highest-paid."

Adding the $10,000 extras again places Feller's income above the $40,000 mark—and on that bookkeeping basis he apparently is tops.

YOUNG MACPHAIL HAS MANY PLANS FOR HIS CHICKS

Reading, Pa., Jan. 23.—(AP)—Equipped with a college degree in economics, 23-year-old Leland Stanford McPhail, Jr., took charge today of one of his dad's newest baseball farms.

He's the new business manager of the Reading club of the Interstate League, and one of the youngest executives in Class B baseball.

"Ever since I was an eighth-grader, I've always wanted to be connected with a ball club," announced the son of the Brooklyn Dodgers' loquacious president, "so I guess Dad is giving me a chance to realize that ambition."

But the younger "Larry" doesn't intend to rest on pop's shoulders.

"I've got some plans for the team, right now, however, I'm not ready to say just what they are," he said.

That pronouncement probably will come shortly after the boss of the front office gets together with his new manager, Fresco Thompson, former National League infielder whom the Dodgers brought in to replace Tom Oliver when they acquired the club last fall.

Right now, the junior MacPhail's main bugaboo is house-hunting. He wants to get domestically established within two weeks so he can devote full time to pointing the club for a repeater of last year's pennant winning ways.

Larry, Jr., is married to the former Jane Hamilton of Tiverton, R. I., whom he courted while both attended Swarthmore College.

He readily admitted that his play at third base for the Quaker college perhaps had something to do with the attraction. His baseball ambitions lay in another line, however, for "I just seemed interested in the business end of the sport."

GRID FRANCHISE IS SOUGHT FOR PHILLY

Philadelphia, Jan. 23.—(AP)—Jack Schafer, Philadelphia hotelman, said today that a group which he heads is seeking a franchise for the city in the American Professional Football League.

The league, which operated with six clubs last fall, probably will be expanded into an eight-team loop at the February meeting in New York, observers here predicted.

"21 CLUB" QUINTET WINS THIRD GAME

The "21 Club" basketball team took its third game out of five last night at the Y. W. C. A. gym, defeating Russell in a lopsided 59-25 game. Mitchell led the local girls with 33 points, Beichner contributed 16 and Carlson ten.

For Russell Safford had 13, Carlson eight and Parks four.

B. Miller; thence northerly by a line parallel with Railroad Street along said Miller's east line to the northeast corner of said Miller's lot; thence westerly along said Miller's lot at right angles with Railroad Street, eighty (80) feet to a stake in Railroad Street; thence northerly along the same eighty-seven (87) feet to the place of beginning, having erected thereon a two story frame dwelling house.

Conewango Club

Cashman	226

It took Bill Lutz' team, headed by Doc Cashman with 226 and 591, to cool off the league-leading Ericksons last night and tighten up matters in the Conewango Club League. . . . The Ericksons obligingly missed in the tenth frame of the first game to lose by eight pins, won the second by 30 and were massacred for three points in the third. . . . Captain Young, whose up-and-coming club took three from the Helmbrechts in the opener, was on deck for the second match and had more to say about its outcome than he did about his own victory. . . . "Butch" Gay rolled 189 for high game and "Toe" Milenius hit 509 for high total. . . . Another interested leader on hand was Captain Trevenen, who reminded the press box that his team had cracked the season's team game mark the evening before by rolling 909. . . . The defeat of the Ericksons gave the Trevenens a deadlock with that club.

The South Side Market improved its margin in the Elks Leading Knights League by copping all four from the Lewis Market while the second position Times Square was copping three from the Hoagvall Hardware. . . Simonsen's and the Turner Radio, which holds third and fourth spots, divided. . . . In the fourth match, the Soda Minerals moved up a peg by whitewashing the Garland Inn. . . . "Cully" Patchen contributed the lone Honor Roll game—221—and Don Hogan hit 91 for high total.

With a clean sweep over the Heaters, Machine Shop remained undefeated in the Struthers-Wells circuit and increased its lead to four games over the second place. . . . Foremen "B" copped three from Process to dislodge that team from second, sending it to fourth, while Sales, with four points over Plate Floor, went into third. . . . The Engineers are in fifth place with a three-pointer over Foremen "A" . . . Stephens' 227 was high single and Walt Draheim's 605 was easily high total.

mediate major objective of a British drive farther along the Libyan coast.

In occupying Tobruk, the British said, their forces captured the headquarters of the 22nd Italian army corps and the commanding general and also the general commanding the fixed defenses of the town.

With the advance of the mechanized units operating in the vicinity of Mekili, the British could take a short cut across an inland road along the coast, these sources said, and attempt to isolate Derna, Apollonia and other towns on the coastal hump.

There was no indication here of how strong the Italian forces holding Mekili are, but military observers said the force was believed nothing like as large as were those at Tobruk.

British circles in Cairo predicted that the remainder of Cirenaica (eastern Libya)—including the coastal bases of Derna and Bengasi—would be in the hands of General Sir Archibald P. Wavell's forces by spring.

These sources said the greatest obstacle to this achievement might be the German air force, which recently has been operating in the Mediterranean. They declared, however, that should Adolf Hitler find it necessary to take a major hand in the war in North Africa in an effort to save Libya for the Italians, Britain would have achieved a major objective in forcing the Germans to divide their forces.

Tobruk's last defenses, the British high command said, fell at noon yesterday before the onslaught of Australian shock troops.

Thousands of Italians were said to have been captured when the Australians stormed into the town. Edward Kennedy, an Associated Press correspondent at the front, reported he saw one detachment of 4,000 prisoners being marched away from the battlefield on Tuesday, the opening day of the assault.

Considering the extent of the fighting, this observer said, British casualties appeared to be light, but the Italian losses were described as heavier than at Bardia—the Libyan port 65 miles to the east which fell to Wavell's men Jan. 5.

Jackson Most Mentioned for Supreme Court

in a late conference with Mr. Roosevelt yesterday.

Besides Jackson and Byrnes, others discussed were:

Francis Biddle, solicitor general;

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general;

Senator Barkley;

Charles Fahy, assistant solicitor general;

Senator Wagner (D-NY);

Former Senator Ashurst (D-Ariz);

Former Senator Minton (D-Ind), now an executive assistant to the president;

Harold M. Stephens, Wiley Rutledge and Justin Miller, associate justices of the U. S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia);

Samuel G. Bratton, circuit court judge in the tenth federal district and former Democratic senator from New Mexico;

Florence E. Allen, of Cleveland, circuit court judge in the sixth federal district;

Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, a Republican;

Lloyd K. Garrison, dean of University of Wisconsin Law School;

James M. Landis, dean of Harvard Law School and former chairman of the securities commission;

Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago;

Samuel Rosenman and Ferdinand Pecora, judges of the New York Supreme Court;

Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator;

Federal Circuit Judge William Denman of San Francisco.

J. D. Wickhem, member of the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

Those who rated Jackson's choice high said that if he got the appointment, Biddle might be moved up to attorney general and Fahy to solicitor general. These sources said that Senator Byrnes, Undersecretary Patterson, Biddle and Fahy would rank in that order for the next vacancy on the high tribunal.

McReynolds, who will be 79 on February 3, will be the fifth living retired member of the court. The others are: John R. Clarke, 83, who retired in 1922; Willis Van Devanter, 81, who stepped down in 1937 during the court reorganization battle; George Sutherland, 78, who retired in 1938, and Louis D. Brandeis, 84, who retired in 1939.

Pennsylvania Parole System Survey Sought

ing before the board.

"Of course this would apply less in my case than in any other," he said. "But take the attorney general. He's one of the busiest men at the capitol. It works a hardship on him."

The matter came before the legislature last January 13 when Rep. Samuel M. Rosenfield (D- Philadelphia) introduced a "uniform parole system" bill suggesting a five-man board to be appointed by the superior court. Members would receive $10,000 a year with $500 extra for the chairman. A general director would receive $7,500 and district supervisors $5,000.

A bill somewhat similar to that of Rosenfield was passed by the 1939 legislature but Governor James vetoed it because there was no provision for an appropriation to finance the board.

"Undoubtedly there are some ways in which we can improve our parole system but the matter requires careful study," commented Livengood.

"Every member of the present board makes a careful study of each case. It does take a considerable amount of the time we might be devoting to other tasks but we're getting the job done. It means a lot of work—but that's what we're elected for."

Big TWA Airliner Crashes

(From Page One)

Pensacola, Fla. His widow is Mrs. Donna Monte Scott of New York City.

The plane smashed on its belly in the back yard of a farm house, about three blocks south of the airport, and careened into a clump of trees.

"The plane is a terrific wreck. I don't see how anybody got out alive," a deputy sheriff reported.

The control tower of the airport said the ship, which was due in from Los Angeles at 1:34 a. m., CST, but was running behind schedule, passed over the field at 4:13 a. m.

The pilot then made a left bank and was preparing to swing in for a landing when the crash occurred.

He was flying at an altitude of about 400 feet. The ceiling was 500 feet.

Several of the passengers were in their berths in the sleeper plane and others were sitting up when the crash occurred.

Bouncing after it fell, the airliner broke apart like a dropped watermelon.

The telephone pole snapped and was found lying across Mott's body.

Baggage, mail and bedding were scattered over a wide area. Off to one side a broken bag exposed five clean, laundered shirts.

State highway patrolmen and sheriff's deputies roped off the scene of the crash and inspectors of the Civil Aeronautics Bureau began an immediate check of the wreckage.

It was announced no official statement regarding the cause of the crash would be made until federal and TWA investigators arrived by air from Kansas City and Washington.

CARBON MONOXIDE IS FATAL AT SEWICKLEY

Pittsburgh, Jan. 23—(AP)—Carbon monoxide fumes from a gas stove snuffed out the lives of Robert McDonald, 23, and his wife, Margaret, 25, as they slept in their cottage in suburban Sewickley yesterday.

Deputy Coroner Arthur G. Seiler said a clogged flue from the stove apparently was responsible for the tragedy.

The couple, married a year ago, was described by a neighbor as being "so much in love that they were the happiest pair in our town." McDonald was a clerk in a creamery. His wife's pet dog, "Teddy," was also a victim of the fumes.

stitute legislation for the aid-to-Britain bill under which this country would lend Britain $1,060,000,000, Canada $500,000,000 and Greece $50,000,000,000.

Another substitute measure was proposed by Senator Johnson (D-Colo). It would permit the government to lend $2,000,000,000 worth of war materials to Britain and receive in return only periodic reports as to how the equipment functioned under battle conditions.

Taft's bill would eliminate all extraordinary powers which would be granted the president under the lease-lend measure and would give the Reconstruction Finance Corporation authority, on request of the president and the Federal Loan Administration, to make the designated loans to Britain, Canada and Greece.

Taft said security should be required unless the loan administration "finds it is not practical for the borrower to give it."

The bill would authorize repayments in ships or other property instead of dollars.

The tall, blond Lindbergh was settled comfortably in the house committee's witness chair as he responded to most of the questions. Sometimes he bent forward and put his lightly clasped hands on the table before him, talking earnestly.

Occasionally he would consider a reply extremely carefully, squirming a bit in his chair. That was the case when Rep. Pfeifer (D-N.Y.) asked whether this country had not neglected Lindbergh's reports of several years ago that Germany was preparing a great air force.

Lindbergh finally answered haltingly that "this country did not construct an airforce as rapidly as advisable."

When he again asserted that the United States and England together could not successfully invade the continent unless a "collapse" preceded it, Pfeifer asked:

"Then Germany is sure to win?"

"She already controls the continent," Lindbergh replied.

Testifying at a house foreign affairs committee hearing on the Aid-to-Britain bill, the flier was asked by Representative Luther A. Johnson (D-Tex) whether he had ever expressed sympathy "for one side or another."

"I prefer to see neither side win," the aviator said quickly.

"I prefer a negotiated peace. A victory on either side would result in prostration of Europe of a type we've never seen."

"It would be one of the worst things that could happen," he declared.

"Are you in sympathy with England against Hitler?" Johnson asked.

"I'm in sympathy with the people—not their aims," Lindbergh replied.

In response to questions by Representative Eaton (R-NJ), Lindbergh told the committee that he was opposed to the lend-lease bill for two reasons:

"First, because I believe it a step away from democracy; second, because it's one more step closer to war a.., I don't know how many more we can take, short of war."

Asked point blank whether he favored [illegible] aid to Britain, he said that [illegible] "a very difficult" question [illegible] he expressed belief that inasmuch as the country had taken a stand on the issue "we cannot very well justify" merely dropping that [illegible].

The flier then predicted that aid to Britain would [illegible] in Europe and expressed doubt that it would greatly affect the outcome.

As for a transoceanic air invasion, accompanied by the landing of troops, Lindbergh said that was "utterly impossible." Further, he said that [illegible] raids from across the Atlantic would do considerable damage [illegible] peace-time standards [illegible] the cost would be [illegible] enemy losses would be large, and the effect on our [illegible] negligible."

It is necessary, he declared, to establish clearly the difference between an air invasion where troops are landed and bombing raids where no attempts are made to establish bases on enemy territory. He declared the two problems were "entirely different."

"There has never been an invasion of enemy territory by air alone," Lindbergh said. "The two outstanding examples of what might be called a partial invasion were furnished by the German occupations of Norway and Holland. But in each of these instances, the landing of troops by air was carried on simultaneously with a ground army invasion on a major scale."

Lindbergh asserted that if air invasion alone could be successful "it would have been used by the Germans against England many months ago."

Although he emphatically declared air invasion of this country was impossible "at this time or any predictable future," Lindbergh asserted he believed that the United States should "wage war with all of our resources if an invasion of Alaska or any other portion of America were attempted."

It was Lindbergh's first major public appearance in a witness chair since he testified against Bruno Hauptmann in the famous kidnap-murder trial six years ago.

The aviator has been sharply critical of the administration's course in foreign affairs, and has voiced his disapproval in several radio addresses.

The house committee will begin private consideration of amendments Monday, the same day the similar senate group starts its hearings. In preparation for the senate hearings Chairman George (D-Ga.) and a subcommittee asked Secretaries Hull, Morgenthau, Stimson and Knox to a strategy conference this afternoon.

ANOTHER CLASS IN SAFE DRIVING STARTS MONDAY

L. E. Seavy, manager of the Warren county branch of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation and the American Automobile Association, today called attention to the next class of the Safe Driving School which will begin Monday evening.

Registrations will be accepted at the offices of the Warren County Motor Club or may be made next Monday at Room 113, Warren High School.

Since its inception here in January, 1939, the school has enrolled 402 students who have taken a course in highway safety which consists of 20 hours of classroom instruction and approximately 24 hours of actual driving instruction in a training car equipped with dual controls. The car with dual control is furnished by the C. C. Smith Co., local Plymouth and Dodge dealer.

While no charge is made for the classroom work, a small fee is assessed for the maintenance cost of the training car during the actual driving and [illegible] instruction.

The schools, located in 58 of the [illegible] counties of Pennsylvania, are sponsored by the Education and Recreation program of WPA, in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Motor Police.

In announcing the start of the new course, Mr. Seavy said today:

"During the year 1940 there [illegible] deaths resulting from motor accidents in Warren County. This figure [illegible] of [illegible] over the 22 reported for the year 1939.

"In addition to the number of persons killed there were [illegible] accidents in which persons were injured in 1940 as against 92 reported in 1939. There was a total of 105 persons injured in 1940 and 175 in 1939. However, the number of accidents was much larger in 1940 with 298 reported for that year as against 241 for the preceding year.

"This high traffic toll in the county is unnecessary and the exercise of common sense while driving would reduce not only the fatality rate but also the large number of accidents."

HEADQUARTERS for Indian [illegible] seems to be the Waldorf-Astoria, which makes a point of opening its kitchens to Hindu cooks so that they may prepare food in the manner prescribed by their religion.

The most distinguished Indian guest was his highness the Maharajah of Indore, Sir Yeshwant Rao Holkar, who traveled with his wife, daughter and a whole retinue of cooks and other servants. During his stay the Maharajah served a great feast for local notables. The menu included pheasant, duck, chicken, lamb, [illegible] whole wheat bread fried in butter, curried vegetables and two or three kinds of sauce.

Beef and pork are forbidden by the Hindu religion. Each dish was served separately, and no liquids were taken with the meal.

The Princess Leiliyathi of Mysore and her sister Princess Rajkumari Chennajammani took a large suite, and although rooms were provided for their ladies-in-waiting, or amahs, the servants preferred to sleep on the floor near their mistresses' beds.

THE Waldorf has sveral $75-a-day suites, as well as some at $35 to $50.

Another hotel has a frequent guest who requests "usual service" when wiring his reservation. The "usual service" is a heavy screen on the window. He walks in his sleep.

The same house drew a big out-of-town crowd for the first Ross-Armstrong fight. The hotel found it had assigned two Chicago gang big-shots to rooms on either side of the suite occupied by two FBI executives. The G-men later sent one of the Chicagoans to prison.
